

Relations as graphs

For relation R on a set A , we can represent this relation as a graph: a collection of nodes (vertices) and edges (arrows). The nodes of the graph are the elements of A and there is an edge from a to b exactly when $(a, b) \in R$.